INFORMS Open Option

INFORMS recognizes open access (OA) as the unrestricted public access to data and manuscripts peer reviewed and accepted on behalf of any of the association's publications. It understands that an author may be required or wish to publish his or her manuscript as open access and with alternative copyright restrictions. As part of its efforts to support open access, INFORMS provides INFORMS Open Option (IOO), an open access alternative for articles accepted for publication in any INFORMS journal that would have otherwise only been available through subscriptions or pay per view. Authors of an accepted manuscript who would like to take advantage of IOO would be responsible for a one-time publication fee of $3,000, which would ensure that the article would be made available to anyone online via INFORMS PubsOnline, for free and in perpetuity.

The opportunity to select INFORMS Open Option is extended only after a manuscript has been accepted for publication; thus, the author's decision in this regard will have no impact on any aspect of the peer-review process or on an editor's ultimate decision regarding publication. The IOO fee must be returned to INFORMS by the corresponding author with page proof corrections.

Authors remain responsible for adhering to INFORMS copyright and permissions policies. While the article would be available via INFORMS PubsOnline, author(s) agree and allow redistribution of this paper by INFORMS in paper-based and electronic formats, as well as digital document-delivery services and databases.

Authors who have opted to take advantage of IOO must also select a preferred Creative Commons license. Visit <http://creativecommons.org/licenses/> for a complete list Creative Commons licenses. Note your selection on the publication license corresponding to your INFORMS journal below and return this form to INFORMS with your IOO fee and page proof corrections.

Because of the limited number of INFORMS journal authors funded by the U.S. National Institutes of Health (NIH) with obligations to deposit in PubMed Central repository, INFORMS current practice will stand but will be reviewed periodically. Currently, INFORMS follows Method C of NIH's submission methods guidelines (http://publicaccess.nih.gov/submit\_process.htm).

INFORMS Open Option FAQs

My funder requires my article to be covered by the CC-BY license. Will participating in INFORMS Open Option (IOO) do that?

Because CC-BY allows for commercial distribution and reuse of the article, not all authors are in favor of it. Once your paper is accepted and you check the IOO option on your accepted article checklist, a production editor will contact you regarding your license preference. If your funder requires you to select CC-BY, you may select this license option at this time. The selected Creative Commons license's explanation will be added to the first page of the typeset article and noted in the article's metadata.

I am thinking of submitting a paper to an INFORMS journal and, if accepted, I would want it published open access. When should I worry about this?

The peer-review process is not related to IOO. Once the peer-review process is complete and your paper is accepted by one of our journals, the option to select IOO will be presented to you on the accepted article checklist.

My paper was already accepted and has been published in Articles in Advance or in an issue. Is it too late to take advantage of IOO?

No, it is not too late to choose IOO, but the process will be different in two important ways. First, the typeset version will not be reloaded online and thus will not denote the paper's open access status. Second, the copyright will still belong to INFORMS and will not revert back to the authors. As with all IOO papers, the article will be freely available to all readers worldwide and will be highlighted with the orange Open Access logo on INFORMS PubsOnLine. To apply for IOO after publication please contact permissions@informs.org.

I can't afford IOO, but my funder still requires me to make the article open access. What are my options?

Authors may post their author accepted manuscript (AAM) on personal websites, scholarly collaboration networks, or noncommercial institutional repositories immediately after acceptance. Posted AAMs must include the DOI (permalink) provided by INFORMS to the final published version of record. Authors may not post their final published version of record except where authorized under an INFORMS Open Option open access publication license.
